

Back in war days I had a side-door cut in my garage, and good hardware being non-existent at the time, the door knob I drew on that job was one of these "utility" models made of nondescript metal.

It gave no end of trouble. One of it favorite tricks was to jam on a winter night and send the brat household dashing around to the front of the house through a cold rain. At long last, however, the lock broke—and I had the necessary excuse to get rid of the outfit.

Now there's a bright new brass door knob on the garage—that shines like a gold tooth.

It's a quality piece which will give me no nonsense.

Every American has had similar experience with wartime makeshift goods. And in wartime we expect it. But in these days of continuing crises, when the government cries "scarcity," and government administrators plug for price control rather than production, it seems to me the common citizen ought to speak up and remind the political big shots that America's industrial reputation was made on mass production of quality goods—not palming off shoddy production under the ultimatum "Take it or leave it."

American manufacturers and merchants, when left to their own devices, aim to give lasting value for a dollar. That's their upbringings in the competition of free enterprise. But the philosophy of government control is something else.

It's possible that continued pressure by politicians in field manufacturing and merchandising which they know nothing about might lead to destruction of—not the industrial "know-how"—but the will to put it into effect.

These are times when citizens should be critically on guard.

No American has forgotten the cheap-john blunders of our federal planners in World War II—when they ordered 2 inches cut off all men's shirttails, and arbitrarily cheapened other goods. They did this at the same time (same war) that the British were concentrating on quality goods. Said the British:

"Look: This suit we're making now has to meet the cut-off time, so it's got to be good. We're at war, and he may not get another one until he's much older."

Which made sense then.

And makes sense now. But all our Washington geniuses did was throw a fit when U. S. papers published the British view.

This time America's citizens have the right to inquire if a bureaucrat is exempt from the rule that a man is supposed to learn something from past experience. The political emphasis on price control didn't help American production quality, after the war was over, and unless our people stand fast for quality today we run the risk of engulfing the whole U. S. production and merchandising machine in shoddy business.

Beef Doesn't Sell Even in Plentiful Areas

By The Associated Press

Sharp reductions in the supply of beef at the packers' level began to affect many retail food stores this week.

Food shoppers found the situation very spotty—even in some neighborhoods some stores had plenty of beef to fill the demand at present prices, while other stores were running low.

But a state senate-house committee on defense production continued its investigation of the beef shortage, blamed by agriculturists on the recent livestock price rollback, most retailers agreed the beef supply was tightening up fast.

The coming weekend and early next week might well find many meat counters bare of popular beef cuts, they said.

The price situation showed irregular trends, too. Hundreds of states across the nation continued its investigation of the beef shortage, blamed by agriculturists on the recent livestock price rollback, most retailers agreed the beef supply was tightening up fast.

The coming weekend and early next week might well find many meat counters bare of popular beef cuts, they said.

With the exception of increases of one-to-four cents a dozen on top grade eggs in a few markets, prices of most other protein foods held about unchanged.

Pork and poultry sales generally continued heavier than normal.

Very heavy shipments of cattle sent its prices tumbling in most places. Lettuce and celery also were leaders among the fresh vegetables cheaper this week. Beans, beets, broccoli, peas and tomatoes were a little lower. So were peaches, arriving in greater quantities and more varieties, and canteloupes and watermelons.

The agriculture department headlines lettuce and oranges on the week's list of most plentiful foods for thrifty buying.

Wholesale food prices, as measured by the Dun & Bradstreet Index, declined a little more this week and now are at the lowest average level since mid-January. The index, representing the total cost at wholesale of a pound each of 31 foods in general use, was at $7.07 compared with $5.94 a year ago.

Cotton Insect Control to Be Discussed

Friday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock cotton insect control will be discussed at the Warren Nesbitt farm near Blevins. Mr. Nesbitt has about 75 acres cotton planted on April 10th that is beginning to square and where boll weevils are emerging. On Monday, County Agent Oliver L. Adams and Mrs. Nesbitt found seven weevils on 100 cotton plants observed.

The exact status of the overwintering boll weevil is not known at present but should be known within the next 10 days states County Agent Adams. The last count in Louisiana by Entomologists at the Federal Stations showed an average of 177 weevils to the acre. The dry weather in May and early June tends to retard the emergence of weevils.

Thrip damage was high in cotton prior to the rains. Lady Beetles are plentiful and with the help of the past rains appear to have aphids or lice under control. Thrips and early aphid damage should soon be overcome.

Timing of the application of insecticides is all important for their greatest value in cotton insect control. The weevils that emerge before squares are formed feed in the terminal bud of the cotton plants. Damaged plants send out side branches and soon recover. Treating large areas and making repeated applications of cotton poisons encourages outbreaks of bollworms, aphids and red spider without corresponding benefits in weevil control.

County Agent Adams says the field meeting as planned for the Nesbitt farm Friday afternoon is to better acquaint farmers in insect control. Insecticides may be applied if overwintering weevil control is an average of more than one weevil is found on 100 cotton plants.

The total injured last month was 217.

Little Rock, June 14—(P)—The scheduled execution of Herman Maxwell, Hope Negro three convicted of rape, was stayed automatically today by his appeal to the Arkansas Supreme court.

Maxwell was convicted several months ago for the third time of rape of a pregnant white woman. His two previous convictions were reversed by the state supreme court.

Airforce to Test New Plane

Niagara Falls, N. Y., June 14—(P)—The Bell X-5—first airplane in the world that can sweep back its wings in flight—will be tested soon by the air force.

The tests will be made at Edwards Air Force base, Muroc, Calif., the air force said yesterday. No date was announced until ready at Muroc.

The jet-propelled X-5 was built by the Bell Aircraft Corp., makers of the rocket-powered X-1, the first airplane to fly faster than sound.

It was understood that the X-5 will be used for tests in the transonic speed range—from about 90 to about 800 miles an hour. The speed of sound is about 700 miles an hour at sea level.

The official announcement made no mention of actual speeds.

Unlike the X-1, the X-5 will be capable of sustained flights over longer periods and will take off and land under its own power instead of being launched from the air from a "mother ship."

The first phases of the tests will be conducted by Jean L. "Skip" Ziegler, 31-year-old chief of Bell's flight research.

After the tests the X-5 will be used as a flying laboratory by the national advisory committee for aeronautics.

The committee will investigate the aerodynamic effects of changing the degree of wing sweepback during flight.

When the X-5 takes off and lands, its wings project from the fuselage like those of a conventional plane. Once in the air, the wings can be "swept back" in varying degrees closer to the fuselage. This permits greater speeds at high altitudes.

The X-5 is the product of three years of research and development by the air force, the NACA and Bell Aircraft engineers.

Winner Named in Amateur Baby Contest

New York—(P)—The problem for today seems to be to see what the class room are having—heroin or algebra?

The question is being explored in a state inquiry into student dope peddling in the schools here.

The inquiry has put back on trial my favorite hero of our times—the teen ager. Well, is he a little saint or a young monster? Many people across America will take the inquiry as evidence in support of their belief he is a brash brat, afflicted with their age.

The situation admits of being shocking. The city school superintendent has said he would accept police estimates that 1,500 high school students here are possible users of narcotics.

But there are 300,000 students here. That means only one out of 200 has puffed the marijuana cigarette, snuffed heroin or studied for algebra without the aid of a hypodermic needle.

Winner of the amateur show was Anna Adams whose pantomime won her a $5 check.

Ginny Herndon won second, and $2.50 award with a reading and Betty Joe Cox's pantomime was third.

Proceeds will go to finance Ann Barr's trip to Girls State.

State Agencies to Show a Balance

LITTLE ROCK, June 14.—(AP)—Arkansas state agencies which operate on money from the capital revenue fund will finish this fiscal year with an estimated net balance of $4,400,000.

In a report to Governor McMath, State Comptroller Lee Roy Beasley said yesterday that the largest balance will be in the public welfare fund—$1,71,48.

The report also said that revenue for the fiscal year which ends this month, will total nearly $2,000,000 more than the 1949-50 revenue year.

Beasley said the total would be about $93,800,44 for 1950-51, compared to $91,441,238 for 1950-49. He attributed the increase to a rise in state sales tax collection. Other sources of revenue showed a net loss of $70,658, he said.

The University of Arkansas and Arkansas State Teachers college are expected to end the year with balances, but other state educational institutions will have little, if any, leftover funds, Beasley said.

DOROTHY DIXFalse Pride

Dear Miss Dix: My husband and I are separated at present, over very foolish things. I love him very much and I deeply regret the break-up. I really think he still loves me too, but is ashamed to confess he is wrong. Is there any way I can get him to see I am sorry for the things that happened and that I still love him?

WILMA

Answer: A direct attack is the best course for you, Wilma. Either you win or lose everything, but at least you'll know exactly where you stand. Arrange for an informal meeting, or if that isn't feasible, write him a letter, admitting where you were wrong and if you admit to a little more than you really feel guilty of, remember much is at stake) and ask for a new start. If he still loves you, he'll be only too glad to accept all overtures and meet you half-way.

PAUL

Answer: You hit the nail on the head, Paul—she is just spoiled! You are unusually susceptible to a woman's tears and it didn't take your girl friend long to find it out. Crying is surely the easiest way to get what you want—when it works, as it seems to with you—and the technique has been developed to perfection in this case.

SO LET'S FACE IT!

You have two courses open. You marry the girl and spend the rest of your life in this lachrymose atmosphere, gazing in to her on every possible count to avoid the teary consequences even though it will loose a veritable Johnston flood of tears.

Marriage is for adults, and there can be no truly happy marriages except between adults. Cry-babies and thin-skinned lassies are not adult and will not bring to matrimony the sense of responsibility it needs. Think twice, Paul, before you embark on the stormy sea of matrimony with a mate who has nothing to contribute but salty tears.

Hard To Apologize

An apology is the hardest thing for some people to make. The words "I apologize" come so grimly as a form of human speech. Almost any wrong will be forgiven if the culprit will just say "I'm sorry!"

A husband stays out late at night and returns home the following evening laden with candy and flowers. They avail for nothing as a peace offering unless accompanied by a verbal gesture of apology.

A woman who will do anything to give physical assistance to a neighbor considers it belittling to apologize for a careless remark that has caused hurt feelings. Where is there a neighborhood that doesn't have at least one pair of people who "don't speak,"—still rift, on matter how wide, could be closed in a jiffy by an outstretched hand and a simple "Forgive me!" Such gestures are far from belittling. They take great moral courage and the longer the breach has unavailed, the harder it is to make apologies. Isn't the minded friendship, the soothed feelings, and the resultant harmony worth the effort?

So don't stand on ceremony, Wilma. Put your pride in your pocket, admit your fault in creating the separation and make a new beginning.

LUCILLA fell down when Derek Marlowe said he had a staff meeting and that he'd be there hours. "Meadows will be there," he explained. "How about stopping by my apartment tomorrow after school?"

Paris' voice squeaked in her head: "Stop by—that's what they all say." She replied, "Why don't we just meet at the phone?" she said, with a brisk politeness.

"Well—it's not exactly—I mean it would have been more satisfactory—but I hate to wait any longer. The fact is we feel little hope is retrogressing."

"Retrogressing!" Lucilla exclaimed.

The voice hurried on. "She's been hanging on to me too much of the time, not playing with the other children or she used to—or when she does, she displays an aggressive antagonism."

Lucilla was too taken aback, and too resentful, to speak. Miss Demarest went on: "Forgive me for having to ask this so bluntly, Mrs. Webb, but are you having trouble at home? Is there any special reason you can think of—I mean, we often get these symptoms in the children of divorced parents, and I thought if you could confide in me, we'd be in a better position to help Hope adjust."

"I assure you—"her voice was too ready; she dug for the lower register and started again—"I assure you there is no trouble whatsoever at home."

The teacher said earnestly, "Sometimes a child's psychological fears have only a trivial surface manifestation, and it's easier for an outsider to spot the danger."

As soon as Lucilla heard "psychological fears," conscience needles her into action. She figured hastily what date graduation was. "After the fifth, I could come over any time."

Miss Demarest said, "Mrs. Webb, she had barely got inside the foyer at home when Gretel announced in a gaily gloomy voice, "Hoopy's school phoned up, and you're to call the teacher right away. The numbers on the pad."

"Where's Hoopy?" Lucilla asked, suddenly frightened.

"In her room. Her and Linda. They've got powder messes all over the rug."

To show she wouldn't be railroaded, Lucilla went on prinkingly.

Then she dialed the number and asked for Miss Demarest.

After a short wait, the teacher's neatly clipped voice greeted her. It sounded as if she'd been running. "Oh, Mrs. Webb, how lucky—I was just leaving the building. I wonder if you could come over tomorrow between 4 and 5, so that we could have a little talk."

LUCILLA felt compelled to murmur something about a doctor.

More Garment Workers Go Back to Work

New York, June 14.—(AP)—More than 6,000 garment workers today returned to their jobs in the first major stoppage in the industry here in 28 years.

Settlement of a contract dispute was announced late yesterday, and coat, suit and skirt makers in women's and children's garment industries were ordered back to work.

The industry shutdown had been caused by the joint board of cloth, suit and skirt makers, a unit of the AFL International Ladies' Workers Union (ILGWU). Elements of the garment industry were not affected.

An agreement between the three major employers involved paved the way for resumption of production in the metropolitan area.

Two thousand of the 6,000 workers were in the New York garment center, and the others in plants in New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Connecticut.

James J. O'Farrell, manager of the ILGWU's New York office, said the manufacturers had agreed to an "equitable distribution" of work among contractors in New York city and outlying areas, with a view toward spreading employment opportunities more fairly. They also agreed to hold to union demands on the method of fixing piece work rates for employees who make only a part of a garment.

The union had not sought a wage increase. But it gained a number of benefits in the new contract which replaces one which expired May 31.

Negro Seeks to Be Louisiana Governor

Baton Rouge, La., June 14.—(UPI)—A New Orleans Negro pharmacist has announced his candidacy for governor of Louisiana.

"As far as I know, I am the first Negro citizen to seek a state office in Louisiana since reconstruction days," said Koralie A. Parker, 40, who came here yesterday to get filling papers.

"I feel that this move will give our country another example to point to in our effort to show that all citizens share some of the privileges enjoyed by the white and three major employers involved.

The Brooklyn-born firebrand, who has devoted most of his life to crusading for Irish independence from Britain, won his comeback battle last night by a slim margin of five votes. Irish political experts are predicting a short life for him in government.

The dull dower house apparition elected De Valera after first ousting John A. Costello, leader of the coalition that had ruled Ireland since 1948.

With the dail almost evenly split and troubled by a score of domestic problems, De Valera will face a rutting fight to stay in power.

"Day" need at the votes of five independent dail members, added to the 60 of his own Fianna Fail (Soldiers of Destiny) party to unseat the Costello coalition.

The vote was even closer than it looked. During nearly 14 hours of debate John Flynn, a Kerry farmer and one of 14 independents in the house, sat undecided.

Then came the ballot on the nomination of Costello for re-election as prime minister. Flinn finally made up his mind to side with De Valera and Costello's nomination failed 74 to 73. Afterward came the vote for De Valera and three of Costello's earlier supporters abstained. He was elected 75 to 69.

De Valera filled the cabinet posts mostly with men who served him during his previous term from 1932 to 1948. He has never shown much liking for seeking support of parties outside his own and observers say this may spell a quick death for his regime.

They say a bid goes to De Valera for a proposed national health scheme—one of the issues which precipitated dissolution of the old and forced last month's election.

The veteran rebel, once sentenced to death by the British for his revolutionary activities, apparently picked up another vote early today. His nominations for cabinet members were approved 75 to 69.

Margaret Feeling Europe's Pace

The Hague, The Netherlands, June 13—(P)—Europe's mad pace is beginning to tell—a little—on Margaret Truman. So today the President's touring daughter took it somewhat easier.

Margaret's schedule had only two major events—morning coffee with the burgomaster of the Hague and lunch with Queen Juliana and Consort Prince Bernhard at Soestdijk palace.

American embassy officials said the whirlwind speed of Miss Truman's tour so far was beginning to tell a big on her, hence the slowdown.

Arriving here from England early yesterday morning, Margaret ended her first day on the continent dancing a foxtrot with Prince Bernhard. The occasion was a glittering formal party at the home of U. S. Ambassador and Mrs. Selden Chapin.

Guests at the party said Margaret "had a fantastic ability for remembering names and putting one or more adult 4-H club faces and names together."

Delegates will call upon President Truman at the White House tomorrow to present him an honorary 4-H club key. The camp will close June 20.

Each state will be represented by two boys and two girls and faces and names together."

SPORTS ROUNDUP

By Hugh Fullerton, Jr.

Birmingham, Mich., June 13 — Jim Standish, the United States Golf Association president, returned from a trip to Britain with the Walker Cup team just in time to listen to the moans of the pros who don't like the traps at Oakland Hills, the site of the 1951 open. . . And it isn't surprising that Standish isn't listening very carefully. . . "There's nothing in this country like the British seaside links," he said. "They're all old and they use the natural lay-out of the ground and the sand dunes. . . The first time you look at the old course at St. Andrews, you think it's awful. But after you play it a few times, you come to like it. . . I read somewhere that bunkers originally were evolved from the places where the sheep used to huddle and dig into the sand. . . Even the grass is the natural grass of the land; they just throw a little fertilizer on it and have a lawn.

Last Report

Big Jim Ferrler, who tied for low score in last week's Palm Beach tournament but finished 13 points behind in the peculiar scoring system, was registering a mild beef yesterday. . . "I think they ought to split the purse and give half to the low medal score," he said. "After all when you play golf for money, there ought to be a premium on skill, an incentive to play your best. There's too much luck in that tournament-like some of those holes out there." He gestured weakly toward the Oakland Hills layout, then added: "Well, somebody has to win and if we all have to play it. . . But if all golf courses were like this one, I'd be a club pro."

Bits From The Bogey Men
Meatless gossip among the golfers concerns the pairing which sends out Jimmy Demaret with Horton Smith and Lawson Little, who as PGA officials slapped Jimmy down for last winter's junket to Mexico. . . But Fred Corcoran, who guided the touring pros for years, comments: "You never can tell. They say I'll never play with that guy again — and that night you see them having dinner together." . . Roberto Develio, the Argentine ace, will play in the PGA tournament as an invited guest although he has become a member of the American PAG. The id was issued just in case his membership wasn't approved in time. . . PGA empanadas of Canada, Mexico, Argentina and Britain also were invited — but not Bobby Locke. . . Proceeds from the playoff for the Winterveine women's tourney this weekend will go to United Cervical Palsy. . . And, as usual, all profits from the three western championships will go to the Evans Scholarship foundation.

ug of any right of protest. Yet Harriman remains a power and a few months ago had the stupidity of effrontery to say that Senator Taft was playing into the hands of Harriman's old friend, the Soviet enemy.

There was one correspondent in Moscow who remained an American at some cost in worry and trouble. Alice-Leone Moats, an adventurous, resourceful reporter, had thumbed her way across Asia to Moscow. She called the turn on Harriman as a tycoon at the time. Several pro-communist propagandists in the Moscow corps hated her.

"I don't want to write like a propagandist," she wrote, "even though today that is a sure-fire way of gaining popularity. Since the Russians have ceased to be 'those lousy Reds' and become our gallant allies, my criticism is practically regarded as treason. To describe a honest bad as uncomfortable is to be accused of being anti-Communist; and, nowadays, anyone who is an anti-Communist is put down as pro-fascist, and neither, I am merely pro-American."

For such sentiments this girl among many other pro-Americans has been blacklisted in the book trade. Her new book, "A Violent Innocence," a vivid close-up of the Mexican revolution, which she lived through as a child, has been ignored as point-blank by the reviewers in the influential New York review sections as the works of their native sons, brave patriots, John F. Kennedy and others.

Gough Lets Touted Tomics Down 2-0DeWitt Says No Deal Is Completed

New York, June 14 — (AP) — No deal has been completed for the DeWitt stock in the Browns declared Bill DeWitt, president of the St. Louis American League club.

The Browns president, however, declined yesterday specific comment on reports Bill Veeck, former owner of the Cleveland Indians, is negotiating for the purchase of the club.

"We are not being forced to sell or negotiate or being forced to talk to anybody because of any debt and we did not borrow $600,000 recently from a bank," he said in commenting on a story by Joe E. Reicher of the Associated Press. Reicher said negotiations for sale of the Browns to Veeck have been completed.

DeWitt said he and his brother, Charles, owe the American league $300,000 but "that is personal loan, not due until Feb. 1, 1954," and is entirely separate from the indebtedness of the baseball company.

The club debt has been reduced approximately $500,000 during the last three years, he added.

The club's chief executive further said:

"There is no stipulation in our loan agreement with the American league that requires us to consult somebody if we wish to sell."

The statement that the Browns may not sell any of their top stars to a rival club without the consent of the American league is absolutely false. There is no such agreement between either the Browns or the DeWitts and the American league or any other person or organization. This can be confirmed by President Will Harridge of the American league.

"The charge in Joe Reicher's story that the Browns are 'debt-ridden' is entirely false. The entire indebtedness of the Browns consist of a $600,000 long term loan from an insurance company and a bank, the details of which are on record in the office of the recorded deeds in the city of St. Louis.

"Neither the Browns nor their subsidiaries have any other obligations and current bills are paid when rendered. In addition the Brown have ample cash for normal operation of their baseball clubs and own valuable franchises and the contracts of many ball players, also real estate appraised for purposes of tax avoidance company loan at $2,487,281.25.

"The Cardinals' lease on Sportsmen's park has 10 more years to run at a rental of $33,000 a year. The Cardinals and Browns jointly own the scoreboard in Sportsmen's park and the net proceeds from the signs are split equally between the Cardinals and Browns.

"We have been approached on several different occasions during the past three years by persons in various part of the country inquiring about the availability of the purchase of our park.

"We have told everyone our stock is not for sale, but naturally if anybody made a genuine offer that would be attractive and they were financially responsible, we would have to listen. Up to this time no one has made such an offer."

Barons Win as Travelers Drop One

Late inning lightning struck throughout the Southern association Wednesday night.

Birmingham unlocked an 8-all tie in the ninth at Memphis with a five-run burst to scalp the Chickasaws, 188. Memphis Hurler Joe Dahlie walked a pair of Barons and was then touched for five straight hits.

Hershell Freeman, Birmingham's amazingly successful relief artist, rescued Mickey Haefner in the eighth and picked up his eighth decision.

The Barons, now only three and a half games back of front running Little Rock, had to overcome their own fielding ineptness to win. They erred five times in the third to hand Memphis four runs.

Mobile scored four times in the ninth to wallop the skidding Nashville Vols, 5-2, and Atlanta struck with three in the eighth to trip Little Rock, 7-4.

New Orleans had a big inning, but it was earlier. The Pelicans pushed four runs across in the third to down slumping Chattanooga, 6-3.

At Nashville's Sulphur Dell, the possible when Von first Baseman Jack Harshman fumbled a grounder. Husky Alan Worthington, rookie Nashville righthander, held a 3-1 lead at the time, but the error seemed to unnerve him. He tossed three wide ones to bear Catcher Ray Dabek and Manager Don Osborn waved in Michigan Jim Atchley. Atchley finished walking Dabek, yielded another pass, a pair of singles and a double.

Chattanooga's losing streak was extended to five games in the loss to New Orleans. Ed Wopiek, stoutish shortstop, eliminated a runner and a double to lead the birds' 10th attack.

Atlanta used 10 bases on balls and three Little Rock errors to bump the Travelers after dropping six runs in the ninth.

Play Continues in Women's Meet

Little Rock, June 14 — (AP) — The medalist and the defending champion clashed today in the Arkansas women's golf tournament at Riverdale Country club.

Mrs. Arthur Dunaway of Conway, who won medal honors Monday with a two-over-par 81, and Mrs. Gordon Perrin, the El Dorado sharpshooter, were to open play in the semi-final round.

Mrs. Joe J. Miller of Hot Springs was paired with Mrs. Diane Harris, a fellow townswoman, in the other semi-final match.

Mrs. Dunaway defeated former champion Mrs. Carle Robbins of Fort Smith, 3 and 2, yesterday, while Mrs. Perrin downed Mrs. Billy Bell of Pine Bluff, 2 and 1. Mrs. Miller scored the major up.

set of the day in beating El Dorado's city Rushing, one up in 20 holes.

Mrs. Harris also had a long road to travel to defeat Mrs. Fredrickman of Little Rock, one up in the 20th hole.

At a meeting of the Arkansas Women's Golf association, the El Dorado country club was chosen as site of next year's tourney. In line with association custom, the organization's new officers were chosen from among El Dorado members.

They are Mrs. Peirrin, president; Mrs. Henry Youkin, vice-president; Mrs. Wilbert DeMars, secretary, and Mrs. James Nobles, treasurer.
